

These maddening rickshaws

The Rickshaw is no doubt a cheaper means of local transport, but at the same time its silencer produces a nerve-wrecking noise. It also leaves a lot of intolerable carbon-exhaust behind for the passer-bys.

The citizens of Rawalpindi launched countless complaints against this torturing machine but to no result.

Rickshaws are being used in the cities and towns of many Asian countries, but without maddening cries and poisonous smoke.

The fact is that concerned local departments have no ears for genuine public distresses. I request the transport authorities to please provide some sort of technical device to these Shrieking-Dragons in the streets and on the roads, day and night, for the sake of public health.
